Leave ATM surcharges behind you.

We've all been dinged by surcharge fees at an ATM that wasn't our own. But as a member of Debden Credit Union, you don't have to rely on our ATMs to keep from getting dinged ever again. In fact, you're part of one of the largest surcharge-free ATM networks in the country.

What's a surcharge?

A surcharge is a fee that the owner of an ATM charges an ATM user. ATMs that have surcharges will usually have a warning screen that appears before you finish a transaction to let you know about the surcharge. Surcharges range from $1.25 per transaction and up, and they are charged in addition to the Everyday Transaction fees applicable to your account.

Any credit union ATM is your credit union ATM.

Belonging to a national ATM network means you can bank ding free® from sea to sea, with access to a national network of surcharge-free ATMs – a network bigger than most banks. Just look for a ding free® sign on your ATM, and say goodbye to those pesky surcharge fees.

For a list of ATM networks where you can use your MemberCard, just look for the network logos on the back of your MemberCard.
